Our Week 7 vote was a three-way battle between Worship, Pariah, and Kismet. I saw some message board threads comparing Pariah to Ralph Nader (Nader a pariah? Hmmm...), its only purpose being to leech votes from the more-worthy Worship, allowing Kismet to steal the vote.

Fear not, Worship fans, for the love is strong, and the life-saving enchantment will live again in Eighth Edition.

On the art side, the Seventh Edition Goblin Chariot beat out the Starter version, and it will get to keep its chair in the base set.

Which card should be in Eighth Edition?

Worship	4732	48.6%
Kismet	3430	35.2%
Pariah	1584	16.2%

Which Goblin Chariot art should be in Eighth Edition?

Seventh Edition	5111	59.0%
Starter	3550	41.0%

Total                      9746                      100%

Total                      8661                      100%

We're still sorting through flavor text submissions from the first entries (Aladdin's Ring and Orcish Artillery), but we're ready to accept even more! This week's card is Verduran Enchantress, a classic "Johnny" card, which will appear in Eighth Edition sporting Rob Alexander's Seventh Edition art. We want player-written text on this one, folks, so get cracking and submit here.

The art vote this week is another showdown between two pieces by the same artist. Mark Tedin did both the Urza's Saga and Seventh Edition illustrations for Phyrexian Colossus, and we want to know which one of those should appear in Eighth.

As for the card choice, we're sticking with red on the heels of Jokulhaups and Obliterate (which is still accepting votes, by the way). Nonbasic land "hosers" have never been a big part of the base set, but R&D wants to include one this time around. But which one? The old school Blood Moon, last seen in Chronicles, or the pesky 1/2 Dwarven Miner from Mirage? Remember that the one that wins will be reintroduced to Extended -- as well as Standard -- when Eighth Edition is released...

And that's that for this week... Remember that your vote counts! Be sure to cast it here, and tune in next week for another exciting set of choices!
