

- Avalon Hill
- Duel Masters
- d20 Modern
- Dungeons & Dragons
- Eberron
- Forgotten Realms
- GI Joe TCG
- Magic Online
- Magic: The Gathering
- MLB Showdown
- Neopets
- Star Wars Miniatures
- Star Wars RPG
- Star Wars TCG

- DCI
- Magic: The Gathering
- Miniatures
- Star Wars
- MLB Showdown
- Conventions
- RPGA

- Chat Rooms
- Message Boards
- Discussion Lists
- Friday Night Magic
- Nationals/Regionals
- Winter Fantasy
- Green Regent
- Living Greyhawk
- Living Force
- Pro Tour
- Regionals
- Sideboard Online
- Worlds

NEW TO MAGIC?
CLICK HERE!

MAGIC ONLINE GATHERER

Article Search ▾

MAGICTHEGATHERING

- ARTICLES
- Related links
 - Read other articles

TOURNAMENTS

MAGIC ONLINE

Article Search ▾ →

The problem with looking for a single solution is that you'll never find more than one. And the first one isn't always the best. But if you're open to the possibility that every problem has an infinite number of answers, you'll have the freedom of choosing the solution you want.

Mark Rosewater · Making Magic
Monday, October 18, 2004

Respond via email

Mark Rosewater archive