Legendology: "Family Man"

Magic Arcana
 Wednesday, August 24, 2005

It's a flavor-fest today at magicthegathering.com. A flavor-stravaganza, if you will. Along with the debut of Matt Cavotta's flavor-focused column Taste the Magic, we present Legendology, a new area of Wizards.com dedicated to fiction set in the worlds of Wizards of the Coast games, including the many planes of Magic: The Gathering.

A second chapter of Scott McGough's Magic story "Family Man" goes up today on Legendology.com. Drawn from the The Secrets of Magic, it chronicles the exploits of Virot Maglan, a mage not to be trifled with, much less threatened.

Virot's spell had flooded the brute's head with noxious black magic designed to cripple an opponent's senses. The ogre's eyes were melting into slime, its tongue swelled to bursting, and blood poured from its nose and ears. It gagged and choked as it tried to draw air, and sank to its knees as the life ran out of its arms.
