

Home > Games > Magic > Magicthegathering.com > Columns

Building On No Budget

Ben Bleiweiss
Building on a Budget
 Monday, February 26, 2007

Preface

BoaB, the Building on a Budget Robot, was introduced in my second column on this site. He immediately malfunctioned, and came back to haunt me at the end of my Exploding Wurms! Evolution. He returned after a long hiatus during my Double Life experiment, showed up as a Trick in my Halloween column, and came back for Christmas for my 8-Post column. BoaB is thoroughly evil and money-grubbing, and wants nothing more than to play the most teched-out, pimp-up Vintage-legal, Mox-laden, hyphenated deck out there. But, there's one question on the minds of everybody who reads this column:

What if Boab, the Building on a Budget Robot, hadn't malfunctioned at all?

Was the above question on your mind?

- Yes, because I just read about it one sentence ago, fatty!
- Yes, because I think BoaB the Robot is the best part of this column.
- No, but I'm gonna play along anyhow and say yes.

Submit my Vote

Insert fade away dream sequence of your choice here.

What is 'What If?' Week?

Ben Bleiweiss has written about his obsession with Magic: The Gathering for over a decade. He's travelled the world because of Magic, both as a player and a writer. When not spending time playing Magic, writing about Magic, or thinking about Magic, Ben is employed by StarCityGames.com, where he works with Magic cards all day long. He lives with his wife in Virginia, and they sleep comfortably at night under their Orgg down comforter.

Discuss on the message boards

Respond via email

Ben Bleiweiss archive

© 1995-2007 Wizards of the Coast, Inc., a subsidiary of Hasbro, Inc. All Rights Reserved.
Terms of Use - Privacy Statement

