Boom/Bust

Planar Chaos rare. Congratulations to Sikyanakotik for being the first to officially guess last week's Card of the Day cycle! All of last week's cards, as Sikyanakotik put it, have "names that contain all but one vowel, including y and w, sequentially omitting the five universal ones. Kudos are also due to Prismatrix for a very close guess earlier in the week and to WeirdCal5135, who seems to have made the same guess as S independently, a mere twenty minutes later.

Card of the Day - lundi 26 novembre 2007

Fact or Fiction

Invasion uncommon. In the Finals of the 2002 World Championships, Carlos Romao defeated Mark Zeigner in a grueling Psychatog matchup by knowing how to use Fact or Fiction on both sides of the table. Romao didn't use up his countermagic on Ziegner's Fact or Fictions or Deep Analysis, instead saving it for the few action spells. When resolving his own Fact or Fictions in the final game, he took the bigger pile every time, overpowering Ziegner's Psychatogs and winning the 2002 World Championship.

This year's World Championships are December 6-9 in New York City.

Card of the Day - mardi 27 novembre 2007

Mana Leak

Stronghold common. In the final game of the 2003 World Championships, Daniel Zink played Mirari against Jin Okamoto—both players playing the Mirari's Wake deck. Okamoto Mana Leaked it, Zink paid. Okamoto Mana Leaked again, and Zink paid. When Okamoto tapped all but one land to Mana Leak an incredible third time, Zink answered with a Leak of his own. The crowd burst into applause—it's not every day you see four Mana Leaks played in one turn.

This year's World Championships are December 6-9 in New York City.

Card of the Day - mercredi 28 novembre 2007

Ornithopter

Antiquities common. When Ornithopter was first printed, no one ever imagined that it might one day appear in the Finals of the World Championships (of course, to do that, they'd have to imagine there would be Magic World Championships). That's exactly what happened at Worlds 2004, where Aeo Paquette's Ravager Affinity deck ran it as a 0-cost artifact—that could happily wear a Cranial Plating and swing for 10.

This year's World Championships are December 6-9 in New York City.

Card of the Day - jeudi 29 novembre 2007

Congregation at Dawn

Ravnica uncommon. Katsuhiko Mori wrapped up his Finals match against Frank Karsten at Worlds 2005 by playing an end-of-turn Congregation at Dawn for three punishing copies of Yosei, the Morning Star. Playing each one by one and then sacrificing them to Greater Good, Mori came from behind to win the game, tapping Karsten down turn after turn and drawing more cards than he knew what to do with.

This year's World Championships are December 6-9 in New York City.

Card of the Day - vendredi 30 novembre 2007

Gigadrowse

Guildpact common. Makihito Morita's deck at Worlds 2006 won by playing Lotus Bloom, Seething Song, and Rite of Flame in some combination to power out a backbreaking Dragonstorm, fetching enough Bogardan Hellkites and Hunted Dragons to end the game. It was Gigadrowse, however, that won him his Finals match against Ryo Ogura through a Circle of Protection: Red. Mihara played Gigadrowse on his own turn, and Ogura sunk the mana (five—they were Urza's lands) into the Circle, but couldn't choose Mihara's impending storm of Dragons as sources because they were not yet in play.

This year's World Championships are December 6-9 in New York City.

Young Wei Recruits

Portal Three Kingdoms common. Congratulations to JakeKessler for being the first to officially guess last week's Card of the Day cycle! Each of last week's cards has a Lorwyn tribe in its name without having the appropriate creature type (yes, even Angelfire Crusader). We also enjoyed a great story from jhklauk about a fully powered Vintage deck and another from Spikeshot Goblin about the dark days before Giant Spider received the reach errata.
